YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'You Need Not Feel Uncomfortable'

Dear Ann: Our big prom is coming up soon. Everything was all set. I have already bought my gown and shoes. The trouble is my boy friend found out just yesterday that he has to bowl that night.

He said he would be glad to let a substitute take his place on the team but on that night they bowl for the trophy. He must be there because he's the best bowler on the team and they are depending on him.

He offered to take me to the prom after bowling but it would be 10:30 at the earliest. My parents say this is too late to go any place.

My boy friend said we could meet at the prom if it was OK with me, but I think I'd feel out of place until he arrived since the prom is for couples only. Please help me solve this one. It's bigger than both of us.

—All DRESSED UP WITH NO PLACE TO GO

Dear Dressed: It would be a shame to miss the prom. Why not ask your closest girl friend if she and her date will pick you up? You could then wait for your boy friend there. Since almost everyone would know the circumstances you need not feel uncomfortable.

It's not an ideal solution but it beats staying home.

Dear Ann Landers: You hear a lot about extravagant wives and stingy husbands. In our marriage the situation is reversed. I am a firm believer in budgeting, living within one's means and saving for the future.

Since we married six years ago it's been a constant battle. My husband spends money freely, buys whatever he takes a fancy to, with no thought of price, need or anything else. He says he's going to enjoy life and he urges me to do the same. If I had a little respect for money as he did we'd be broke in no time.

Am I a fool for living this top-sided existence? Should I spend spend spend as he does? Perhaps if I did he'd wake up. I'll take your advice.

—PINCH PENNY

Dear Pinch: I can't be of much help because I don't know how much your husband makes, how much it costs you to live, or how much he spends.

If he is totally irresponsible it would be disastrous for you to "spend spend spend as he does." In most marriages one partner is usually more practical about money than the other. It looks to me as if you're it, Toots.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it necessary to send a written thank-you note for gifts received at a bridal shower?

My daughter says yes. I don't agree. Belle is a business girl. By the time she gets home from work and has dinner it's 7:30 p.m. She is so busy addressing invitations, making the church arrangements and having clothes fitted that the girl is exhausted trying to keep up.

I say it is not essential to write a note for every shower gift. Belle said your word will be final. I hope it is "NO." Thank you.

—EXHAUSTED, TOO

Dear Too: Relax, because the word is "NO." A verbal "thank you" when the gift is unwrapped is sufficient.

Dear Ann: I hate to admit that I work with people of such low caliber, but I need your help.

This is a large office and several dozen desks are placed side by side. I can't leave a stamp, a quarter, a package of gum, a sack of candy or even a tube of toothpaste in my desk drawer. Everything disappears.

I have a strong hunch who the guilty person is, but I have no proof. Of course he would deny it and I'd have an enemy for life. What shall I do—DISGUSTED

Dear Disgusted: If you have a desk with no lock, go to the office manager and ask for a desk you can lock.
